

Waxing is the process of removing hair from the root by using a covering such as wax, to adhere to body hair, and then removing this covering by pulling out the hair from the follicle.

New hair will not grow back in the previously waxed area for four to six weeks, although some people will start to see regrowth in only a week due to some of the hair being on a different hair growth cycle. Almost any area of the body can be waxed, including eyebrows, face, pubic hair, legs, arms, back, abdomen, knuckles, and feet. There are many types of waxing suitable for removing unwanted hair.

The great thing about waxing is that, when it is done correctly, it pulls the hair out from the root and leaves you skin smooth and hair-free for up to a month. While not entirely painless, it is a fast procedure and usually doesn't leave any traces, apart from some slight redness for up to an hour or so after treatment.

For many men, the word waxing immediately conjures up ideas of extreme pain. However, the truth of the matter is that most men who choose to fully remove their hair usually end up learning that waxing is preferable to shaving. While waxing does involve a bit of pain, it's usually not nearly as painful as you'd imagine. Not only that, but the pain of waxing only lasts a few seconds, whereas with shaving you'll be forced to deal with uncomfortable itching for much longer.

This means that a good wax job may last for several weeks before the hair starts to regrow, while you'll need to continually shave your chest several times a week to keep it hair free.

Back waxing for men is extremely common. Not only are more guys getting hair removal services in general, but the back is high on the list or commonly treated areas, removing all the hair from the upper and lower back to just over the shoulders, this will be filtered to look like the hair naturally fades out rather than just stopping.

Strip waxing (soft/warm wax). A cloth or paper strip is used to remove wax and encapsulated hairs, used for all areas.
